Lost $10.00 at Banco Poker.

During the past week a gentleman from California has been stopping at the Brown Palace Hotel. Last night he left for the east. Besides possessing the desirable qualification of being extremely wealthy, this gentleman is also the hero of a regular hair-raising buncos poker game. He lost $40,000 over a table between 3 o'clock one Saturday afternoon and 9 o'clock the next morning, but telegrams sent out to country banks early on Monday morning to stop payment on about one half the checks that he had given out during the game. The funniest part of the whole story is that with three men working him, the victim himself proposed the game and introduced the three steers to each other, all of which was part of the play.

The gentleman was stopping at a little seaside resort 18 miles out from Los Angeles, and while there met a man representing himself as an official of the Canadian Pacific Railroad on his way to San Francisco on business. For two days the pair chummed together. Another guest arrived from Chicago, who also made known the fact that he was destined to San Francisco. It is superfluous to relate that the strangers were affable to each other. Anxious to make things pleasant for his friends, the old gentleman introduced one stranger to the other, seeing that they both intended remaining at the hotel over Sunday and then going on to San Francisco. The newcomer was in the boot and shoe line.

Soon there was another arrival, and he proved a high roller. He was a stockman returning to his ranch from market, and he had a roll of bills as big as his head. He ordered everything and paid for it in big bills. There seemed to be nothing less than a tanner in the whole lot. It did not take him long to get acquainted with the old gentleman. He got acquainted with every soul about the place before he had been there a night—all but the Canadian Pacific man and the boot and shoe man. When he did meet those two worthies, it was through the medium of the genial old gentleman.

With such good fellows around him a poker game was the only result, and soon it was going. The railroad magnate did not know much about the game, the boot and shoe man hoped it would be a small limit, and the stockman did not care how high it went—the higher the better for him, he said. So the game started. It opened at 3 o'clock that Saturday afternoon, and was still going at 9 the next day. Then it ended the old gentleman was out $700 in cash and $10,000 in checks. The stockman had not a dollar of his big roll left, which was easily $10,000, and he, too, had given checks for $25,000. The game had simply been a rip snorter, and everything went.

It was the stockman who threw up his hand. He said he could not stand it any longer. The three agreed to give him a revenge game after dinner, and so the matter rested for a time. When dinner ended a note was handed the old gentleman signed by the railroad magnate, expressing regret that a telegram had been received necessitating his going to San Francisco without delay, and that the boot and shoe man had decided to accompany him. With the wings of a bird the old man flew to the apartment of his fellow sufferer, the stockman, and recited the facts within his knowledge. "Banquet," said the stockman, and thereupon a plan was made to head off the pair. Telegrams were sent out to all the country banks on which the checks had been given, they being scattered to places where the players had deposits. These the old gentleman himself filed at the telegraph office, while the stock grower hastened to the police headquarters to invoke aid from that source.

"Now let us wait till to-morrow," knowingly said the stockman, "and we will save all that money and most likely bag our game."
Monday morning there was another surprise awaiting the now thoroughly surprised old gentleman—the stockman was missing. He had been in the deal bigger than any of the trio. His roll had been good only for a hundred or so, the balance being counterfeit, and he had remained behind to keep the old gentleman off the trail while his pals cleared out.

THE BREATH of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he becomes an object of disgust. After time ulceration sets in, the spungy bones are attacked, and frequently destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing severe bronchitis, which is usually the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results by its use for years past, properly designated Ely's Cream, has been the best and only cure. Call upon your druggist for it.

Ely's Best is the best Butter made Price 35 cents per pound.

Just received 10 boxes large Florida Oranges.

5 crates fine Florida Tomatoes. Will sell at reduced rates.
